Dear Mr. Lake,

I would like to make it known that I, an American consumer, firmly believe in the right of consumers to know when the dairy products on their supermarket shelves have been produced with the use of hormones. All such products ought to be labeled.

Since everyone has the right to consume whatever he or she wants, they deserve accurate information to aid in their purchase decisions. This is especially important when choosing among foods they will not only consume themselves, but will also bring home and feed to their children, who are disproportionately affected by food ingredients because of the small size of their young bodies.

If my opinion needs to reach another office, please provide me with the necessary contact information.

I appreciate your attention.

Sincerely,
Mary Dyer
